

A photograph of a balcony with intricate wrought-iron railings. The railings are dark and feature complex, repeating patterns. The balcony is set against a clear, bright blue sky. The lighting suggests it might be late afternoon or early morning, as the sky is a deep, clear blue. The railing in the foreground is slightly out of focus, while the railing further back is sharper. The overall composition is a low-angle shot looking up at the balcony.

Welcome and General Information

The City of New Orleans and the American Comparative Literature Association are delighted to welcome you to ACLA 2010. We have put in place with your intellectual and collegial assistance a dynamic and international conference with more than 200 seminars ranging in focus across the globe and through centuries. Each in its own way addresses the conference theme and allows us to explore from the creole, diasporic, and cosmopolitan vantage point of New Orleans our shared theme. In addition to roundtables on the job market and translation studies and a poetry evening at the Gold Mine, at the center of these conversations will be Dr. Sheldon Pollock's plenary address, "Cosmopolitan Comparison."

Working with our Conference Committee, Seminar Organizers, Secretariat and our hosts in the French Quarter, we have made every effort to ensure a well-run and successful conference; some general information follows below on practical matters. We've tried to address all request and contingencies, though the ongoing scale of the conference with its nearly 2,000 presenters has combined with our choice of smaller historic venues to pose particular challenges. We hope that you will be patient with any glitches or delays that may arise and thank you for joining us in the Big Easy.

Elizabeth Richmond-Garza and Haun Saussy

BUSINESS MEETING: As this year's conference has outgrown the capacity of any available dining hall and we do not have the advantage of any academic institutional support, the business meeting will not be able to include a lunch. It is our hope that the catered reception on Thursday evening will allow for the socializing we all have come to connect with the ACLA annual meeting, and that participants will be able to join us for a briefer and more purely business-oriented meeting on Friday at 12:30 in the Queen Anne Ballroom.

BANQUET: The festive banquet and awards presentation on Saturday will be held in La Nouvelle Ballroom, Mezzanine B with appropriate Louisiana cuisine and drinks overlooking Royal Street, following Dr. Pollock's address in the near by Queen Anne Ballroom.

GRADUATE STUDENT RECEPTION: A Graduate Student Reception has been organized by the Comparative Literature Graduate Organization (CLGO) and the Faculty in Comparative Literature at Louisiana State University” Cash Bar and Readings by Louisiana Writers in the “Haut-Lieu” of Literary Life in New Orleans, “The Gold Mine Saloon” (701 Dauphine St., corner of Dauphine and St. Peter). Special thanks to poet Dave Brinks.

BREAKFAST AND COFFEE BREAKS: As part of the conference registration fee, each participant is invited to enjoy pastries and coffee or tea before the first stream of seminars on all three days of the conference. Because of the small and historic nature of each of our four venues, we are asking participants to take breakfast in the venue in which they will be presenting or hearing papers. All four hosts, the Monteleone, the Astor, the Bienville and Arnaud’s will also continue coffee service in the break between Stream A and Stream B seminars until 10:30 AM.

BOOK EXHIBIT: The book exhibit will be located in the Hotel Astor in the midst of the break-out rooms on the Second Mezzanine. The exhibit is open 9-5 on Friday and Saturday, 9-12 on Sunday.

International Dictionary of Literary Terms (DITL www.ditl.info), an ICLA project, Jean-Marie Grassin, General Editor

A DITL information desk will be available during the Book Exhibit

DITL contributors, prospective authors, project representatives, interested persons welcome

Acknowledgments

This year, the Program Committee has built up an astonishingly vast and various conference from the papers and panels proposed by our membership. Planning this year's conference required extraordinary effort on the part of the ACLA Secretariat. Professor Elizabeth Richmond-Garza, Billy Fatzinger, Julianna Leachman Maryam Shariati, and Yin Xing put in untold hours of work synthesizing and correcting a vast and various program. As complexities arose, I had reason to be particularly grateful to Professor David Damrosch of Harvard University for his resourceful thinking, unflappability, and material aid. Professor Dudley Andrew, chair of Yale's Department of Comparative Literature, contributed generously to the conference preparation, as did Deputy Provost Emily Bakemeier. I am grateful as well to Felicia McCarren and Mel Chin for advice and suggestions. I offer sincere thanks to our hosting hotel, the Hotel Monteleone, and to Lisa Thompson and Janice Padwa especially. Thanks also go to our other hosts in New Orleans, Caroline Hubbard at Arnaud's Restaurant, Joan Richard-Smith and Myrtle Haynes at the Hotel Astor, and Erin Borerros at the Hotel Bienville. Final thanks extend to Professor Adelaide Russo and her students from Louisiana State University, Professor Thomas Klingler, Chair, the Department of French and Italian, Tulane University and M. Brochenin, the Consul Général de France à la Nouvelle Orléans, and all those who have exemplified Louisiana hospitality.

Call for Seminar Proposals and Papers

ACLA 2011

Simon Fraser University, Vancouver, April 7-10, 2011
“World Literature / Comparative Literature”

“Left to itself,” Goethe wrote, “every literature will exhaust its vitality, if it is not refreshed by the interest and contributions of a foreign one.” The same is true of literary-critical approaches.

To Vancouver—a city where fifty-two percent of residents speak a first language other than English—we invite you to a discussion of world and comparative literatures.

What is world literature? What is comparative literature? What can be gained from setting these concepts in dialogue? What scholarly methods can best account for the freshness, excitement and, yes, fear of experiencing the “foreign”?

In 2011 the ACLA Convention will highlight the processes of cultural renewal that follow from contact with other cultures. Questions of transmission and translation, but also of interference and resistance, will be at the center of this conversation located in one of the world’s cultural crossroads.

We invite proposals and submissions that explore ideas, texts, films, and works of art that cross cultural, disciplinary, temporal, national, and ideological divides to speak, influence, and transform.

We invite proposals for eight- or twelve-person seminars as well as individual paper proposals, which should be submitted via the “ACLA 2011” link at the ACLA website:
<http://www.acla.org>.

Seminar Proposal Deadline: September 15, 2010

Deadline for Paper Proposals: November 1, 2010
